

Broadband over power lines would be a huge problem causing RF to bleed into other services and disrupt many communication modes. HAM radio would be affected due to the many antenna systems used and the sensitive receivers of these operators. Because of the very nature of the RF induced lines you may well have radiated waves on any number of frequencies across the spectrum.